1 in 29 children in school today have been bereaved of a parent, brother or sister. We're supporting UK Children's Grief Awareness Week (17-23 November 2015): a chance for us to come together to show our support for bereaved children. Organisations across the UK will be raising awareness of the grieving children in their community, and those supporting them. Coordinated by the Childhood Bereavement Network and Grief Encounter, there are loads of ways you can get involved.

The Week kicks off with Children's Grief Awareness Day on 17 November, a global day designed to help us all become more aware of the needs of grieving children — and of the benefits they obtain through the support of others.

The theme of Children's Grief Awareness Week 2016 is #MakeTime2Listen: bereaved children need those around them to listen carefully and help them feel supported. How will you #MakeTime2Listen?
